

KARAM SINGH

Karam Singh has nearly two decades of experience in leadership and senior management roles for various leading public organisations and a global philanthropy.

Previously, he held leading positions with the South African Human Rights Commission (SAHRC) with particular expertise in the area of socio-economic rights.

He spent several years as project specialist at the Special Investigating Unit (SIU), South Africa's premier anti-corruption agency. After leaving the SAHRC, he led the Open Society Foundation-SA's programming including the access to justice initiatives.

Karam has worked as an attorney in private practice in New York and South Africa and is an admitted attorney in both jurisdictions.

Karam's university years were spent at Brown (BA); Georgetown University Law (JD); University of Cape Town (LLB); University of Pretoria (LLM); Blavatnik School of Government, Oxford University, certificate in anti corruption turn around strategies.