

TANYA VOGT

Tanya Vogt has a BA honours from Wits University, majoring in African Literature and Archaeology. Currently Tanya is the Executive Officer of The South African Medical Technology Industry Association (SAMED), a position she has held since January 2007.

SAMED is a not-for-gain voluntary trade association and aims to be the voice of the medtech industry in South Africa. Its members include medical device, medical equipment and In Vitro Diagnostics Companies in South Africa. SAMED's vision is to ensure a sustainable, ethical and transformed medical technology industry in South Africa.

Locally, Tanya sits on the Nappi Advisory Board (NAB), is a steering member of the Medical Devices and In Vitro Diagnostics Innovation Cluster (MeDDIC) and the Health Sector Anti-Corruption Forum. She is also a member of the CSIR local manufacturers advisory board and supports the MedTech master plan local manufacturers collaboration group.

Internationally Tanya is the South African medical technology industry representative on the Global Harmonisation Working Party and a board member of the Global Medical Technology Alliance.
